

EHU Doctors Honoris Causa

The EHU students can choose different modules of higher education training:

1) Module leading to the award of bachelor's degree — 4 years. It comprises two years of the Artes Liberales program which includes the study of two European languages (English and French/German/Italian), computer skills, the humanities and social sciences, and two years of training in the major field.

2) After receiving a bachelor's degree, students can continue studying for another year to obtain a higher education diploma or apply for a two-year program leading to the award of a master's degree.

Today thirteen major and three minor programs provide the basis for undergraduate and diploma studies at the EHU. These include major programs in Philosophy, Cultural Studies, Theology, Political Science, Psychology, International Law, World Economy, Economics, History and Theory of Art, Art Design, International Cultural Tourism, Computer Science (Web design and Computer Graphics). Minor programs are offered in European Studies, International Economic Law, and American Studies.

As of academic year 2001-2002, more than 900 undergraduate students are enrolled in the University's academic programs.
